Supplier Consolidation

Program Management

Consolidation - Total Cost of Ownership Reduction

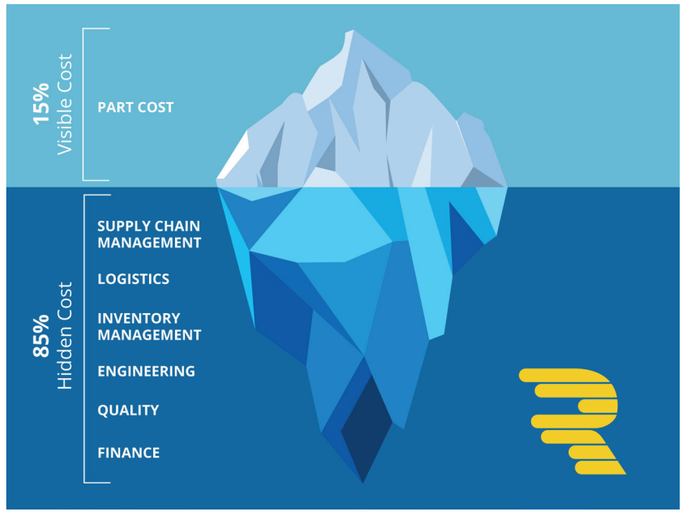

Total Cost of Ownership (TCO) is relevant when 'supplier consolidation' is considered and when simplifying operations. Mostly used in businesses with OEMs.

How Consolidation Impacts TCO:

- ✓ Volume discounts: Larger order quantities often result in better unit prices.
- ✓ Efficient administration: Less time and fewer resources are needed to manage multiple suppliers, negotiate seperate agreements, or process multiple invoices.
- ✓ Reduce operational costs: The supplier may offer service agreement, maintenance, and support which can lower long-term expenses.

Benefits of Consolidation in Relation to TCO:

- ✓ Simplified logistics: Costs are reduced by centralizing deliveries and receiving fewer but larger shipments.
- ✓ Long-term partnership: A closer relationship with the supplier can lead to better service and lower costs over the time.

"From reducing 'Total Cost of Ownership' (TCO), to having the right quality product in stock, to understanding part consumption, you need a partner who can create value across your entire company.

Besides part price, we also focus on all the hidden costs of parts management."

Sustainability & Corporate Social Responsibility

"How can we remain a responsible and innovative partner, while creating value for both customers and the planet?"
